Interest in Safe Auto Driving Wakes Civic Spirit; Many Praise Herald Competitions

Washington's loyal civic spirit has been aroused in support of The Washington Herald's unique safe-driving contests, the sixth of which is taking place this week.

The commendation of officials and leading citizens is being given orally and by letter to this effective campaign against careless and dangerous driving, demonstrating general interest.

"I have watched the progress of The Herald's safe-driving contests and consider them just the thing needed," declared A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens' Association yesterday. "The whole question of street safety, I believe, is one of education and the best fostered in the press. I am glad The Herald has come to the fore and instituted the campaign."

Law Seen Inadequate.

"We have laws and regulations to take care of careless motorists but the law does not reach the heart of the matter. Thoughtless and wilfully dangerous driving can be eliminated only by signal recognition of men and women who drive carefully and can publicly be pointed out as good examples. The Herald campaign is universal in its effects. Four sharp-eyed crossing policemen are jotting down license numbers of cars whose drivers demonstrate they know and intend to obey the traffic regulations. These are being transmitted through Capt. A. J. Headley, traffic chief, to The Herald's Automobile Editor, who ascertains drivers' and owners' names at the District license office."

Names in Honor Roll.

When fifty names have been reported, the names will be inscribed in a Roll of Honor to appear in the Automobile Section of The Herald Sunday. Letters of congratulation will be dispatched to the men and women honored. They and fifty friends also will be guests of the National Theater management at Monday night's performance of Louis K. Anspacher's new drama, "Stepping Stones." This courtesy will be extended by Director W. H. Rapley and Henry Miller.

KILL MAN, HIDE BODY IN BRUSH

Walter Pattengill, 65, Is Victim of Robbers, Baltimore Police Believe.

(Special to Washington Herald.)

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 7.—With two bullet wounds in his right side, the body of Walter Pattengill, 65 years old, of Annapolis road, Westport, was found early this morning in the bushes in a secluded spot across the roadway from Mount Auburn Cemetery, Westport.

The aged man had been robbed of all valuables. His right hand was tightly clutching a leather watch fob.

The roadway and bushes nearby give evidence of a struggle, and the police are working on the theory that he was held up and murdered when he showed fight.

The body was found at 7:30 a.m. by Edward Murphy, a printer, who was on his way to work. Until the body was moved and blood began flowing from the wounds, it was believed Pattengill had died of heart failure.

The police made a careful search of the neighborhood, but no pistol was found.

CAPITAL SIXTH IN CENSUS GAIN

Population Increase Since 1910 Greater than 43 States of Union.

Ranking below forty-one States of the Union in relative population figures, the District of Columbia showed a net gain of 106,592 or 32.2 per cent over the census of 1910, according to a report of the Bureau of the Census last night.

Though eighth from last in point of population, the District stands sixth on the list of relative gains over the previous census, Arizona being far in the lead with 63.1 per cent; California, 44.1; Montana, 43.6; and Wyoming, 33.2 per cent. Idaho, 32.6, follows in the order named.

The District's population in 1900 was only 278,718. In 1910 it was 321,669 and in 1920 428,251, showing a gain of 56,582, or 17.6 per cent, over the 1910 figure.

The District of Columbia's rate of increase this census is more than twice that of the country as a whole, which is 14.9 per cent. Much of the District's gain is ascribed to the influx of war workers who, when the work for which they came to Washington was finished, were absorbed in government departments which have expanded and in commercial houses.

National figures show that 51.9 per cent of the population live in the cities. The District's population is 100 per cent "urban," there being no rural section of the National Capital.
